Whether you're home school your son or you just want them to become world citizens, learning Spanish will greatly benefit them. In fact, raising a bilingual child is one of the best educational decisions a parent can make. Why should you teach Spanish to children? childhood is the perfect time to learn a new language. Since childhood, we learn the language by listening. frequent exposure to different words and sounds favors and develops these abilities. as we age, however, it becomes more difficult and difficult to learn and maintain new languages. the advantages of being bilingual are vast, and teaching your child from a tender age, he or she will be at an advantage over their peers. even a basic knowledge of a second language can help them immensely when you get to high school or college courses and immerse yourself in more advanced Spanish grammar and vocabulary. Later in life, being bilingual can also lead to more work opportunities, a broader cultural understanding, and also a higher salary. So, where do you start?
