Deleted contact apk

It's no secret that people come and go in your life. Whether ex-partners, old friends or that guy you met once and never spoke to again, there's no shame in admitting we don't stay in touch with everyone we ever cross paths with. Sometimes, the best way to say goodbye is to remove those individuals from your virtual bubble, and thankfully, deleting contacts on your iPhone or iPad is a very easy process.Here, we'll walk you through the steps to do so – and fear not, this should work for all generations of iPhone and iPad, whether you own an iPhone 12 Pro or an iPhone 6S. Deleting a contact essentially means permanently deleting an individual's contact details from a given device. If you delete a contact from your email account, though, you'll also permanently delete the contact from all devices signed into that email account, so that's worth bearing in mind before taking action.From your iPhone home screen, hit the Contacts app to open up the list of individuals stored on your device.Tap the contact you want to delete, then press the Edit button in the top right hand corner of the screen. This will bring up a list of customization options for that contact, but you'll want to scroll right down to the bottom to reach the Delete Contact button.Image 1 of 3(Image credit: Future)Image 2 of 3(Image credit: Future)Image 3 of 3(Image credit: Future)Once tapped, the Delete Contact button will bring up a second button repeating the command; this just acts as a way of confirming this is the action you wish to take. Tap the button again to delete the contact.It's also worth noting that you can re-add any contact, any time after deleting – just in case that lucky someone manages to find their way back into your life.How to crop and rotate photos on an iPhone Photo: Justin Sullivan (Getty Images)Facebook's terrible, horrible, no good, very bad week continues. Though the social network's "contact import" feature has been around for a very, very long time, you've probably forgotten about it. And if you want keep Facebook from filling in the gaps by collecting data about your friends from you—or worse, records of your call data—it's easy to shut your devices up.What have you already told Facebook?Screenshot: David MurphyTo get a look at the contacts you've already uploaded to Facebook, you'll want to visit Facebook's Manage Invites and Imported Contacts page. You might be slightly shocked to see open invites from many, many years ago still active—just a little head-nod to the viral aspects of the social network back when it was still getting off the ground (and more of a collegiate gathering ground than anything else). Feel free to delete these; who needs an invite to Facebook nowadays anyway?The lower section on the page shows you all the contacts that Facebook has imported from you—which sounds ominous, but it's a practice you likely gave the service permission to do at some point in your Facebook history. One hopes.Screenshot: David MurphyYou can go through these contacts name by name if you really want, but it's probably better to just delete them all in one big swoop. Click on the "Remove all contacts" link, confirm the deletion by hitting "Remove," and take a small moment to yourself while Facebook purges this data—again, one hopes.Screenshot: David MurphyWhile your mass-deletion will make Facebook's "friend suggestion" tool less useful, that's a small price to pay for helping your friends out by not sharing information about them that they have chosen not to share with Facebook themselves. Finding friends on Facebook is easy; becoming a good data steward is a little trickier, but totally achievable.Screenshot: David MurphyYou can also perform the same trick for contacts you've uploaded via Facebook's Messenger app. Just click on this link to see your data dump. As before, you can delete all the contacts, which will make Facebook's friend recommendations less useful and also help keep the social giant from learning more about your friends than they wanted it to know—at least, from you.Don't automatically re-upload your contactsOne little quirk about Facebook is that if you've already turned on the setting that allows your device to automatically import your friends' contact information to Facebook, deleting this information won't do any good—it'll just re-sync the next time you use the app. Let's fix that.Within the Facebook app, tap on the hamburger icon. On Android, you'll be looking for the App Settings option. On iOS, you'll have to tap on Settings toward the bottom of the screen, then Account Settings, then General. Screenshot: David MurphyIn either version of the app, you'll then look for an option about Uploading Contacts—likely with the subheader "Automatically upload new and updated contacts." Tap that, and flip it off to prevent Facebook from automatically repopulating the contacts you just deleted.And because Facebook makes this process as easy as possible, you'll also have to pull up the separate Messenger app and toggle a similar switch there. Once you're in Messenger, tap on your profile picture in the upper-left corner of the app. Look for the People option on the "Me" screen, tap it, and then de-select the option to "Sync Contacts."Screenshot: David Murphy Source: Andrew Myrick / Android Central When it comes to our Android devices, we tend to go through and organize everything, including going through to delete duplicate contacts from your list. Even though this feels like a chore, there are some of the best Android apps that we can use to help clean up our contact list. Whenever we switch from one of the best Android phones from last year to the newer version, duplicate contacts can appear, and it's just frustrating for everyone. Thankfully, the days of having to go through and find every single duplicate manually are gone, as there are apps that do the hard work for us. How to delete a contact from your Android phone Open the Google Contacts app on your phone. Locate the contact you wish to delete and tap on it. Source: Android Central Tap on the three-dots in the top right-hand corner. Select Delete. Confirm that you wish to delete the contact. How to find and merge duplicates Open the Google Contacts app on your phone. Tap the hamburger menu button in the top left-hand corner. Source: Android Central Tap on the Suggestions button. From this menu, select Merge duplicates Source: Android Central After choosing the Merge duplicates option, you'll be given two more options from the Contacts app. The first will offer to accept a single duplicate suggestion by tapping Merge. If you want to merge all possible duplicate contact suggestions, tap on the Merge All button. One might think that Google wants you to worry about an "all or nothing" approach, but the Contacts app has one more trick. If you want to pick and choose which contacts to delete, here's what you need to do. Open the Google Contacts app on your phone. Tap the three-dot button in the top right-hand corner. Source: Android Central Tap on More in the top right-hand corner. Tap on the Select button. Go through your suggestions and choose the contacts you want to merge. When finished, tap the three-dot button and then select Merge. Source: Android Central Delete duplicate contacts with an app There are a plethora of solid contact replacement applications on the Play Store with different special features. One example is the aptly-named Duplicate Contacts Fixer and Remover which not only syncs your contacts but gets rid of duplicates even quicker. Open the Duplicate Contacts Fixer and Remover app on your phone. Select the account that you wish to remove the duplicate contacts of. Tap on the Find Duplicates button within the app. Source: Android Central After the scan has been run, the app will show all duplicate and similar contacts in your list. Tap the Delete Duplicates button, and the app will remove any duplicates that were found. It's a great feeling to go through your contact list and know that no more duplicates are wasting your time. Between the available third-party apps in the Play Store and Google's own Contacts app, there's a way for you to get rid of those duplicates quickly and easily. Keep your contacts list clean and organized Over the years, your contact list can become a jumbled mess, especially if you've switched between devices. However, it will be much easier to call the right number, after the duplicates have either been merged or deleted. Over time, your iPhone's contact list can get rather extensive. Before you know it, you're scrolling forever through a multitude of people you really never call or text. The list gets even longer when you add other accounts to the device, like Gmail, Yahoo, and Outlook. In this guide, we show you how to delete contacts on an iPhone. Removing a single contact is easy, but ridding yourself of multiple contacts requires a trip online or a third-party app. We serve up four ways to trim that contact list for 2021. Delete a single contact If you need to delete one or two contacts, this is the best route. Unfortunately, you can't delete more than one contact at a time. Skip to the next section if you need to delete a handful of contacts. Step 1: Tap to open the Contacts app. Alternatively, you can access your contacts in the Phone app by tapping the Contacts tab at the bottom. Step 2: Tap on the contact you want to delete. Step 3: Tap Edit displayed in the top right corner. Step 4: Scroll down and tap Delete Contact. Step 5: Tap the Delete Contact pop-up balloon to confirm. Step 6: Repeat these steps for the next contact. Delete multiple contacts at once Because the Contacts app doesn't provide the means to delete multiple contacts at once, you'll need to open a desktop browser (not mobile) and visit the iCloud website. Apple provides a tool to delete multiple contacts at once, but it's somewhat hidden. Step 1: Go to iCloud.com in a desktop web browser and log in using your Apple ID credentials. Step 2: Click to open the Contacts web app. Step 3: Press and hold the Ctrl key and click on all the contacts you want to delete. They should all appear in the panel to the right. Step 4: Click on the gear icon in the bottom left corner. This opens the Settings menu. Step 5: Select Delete on the pop-up menu. Step 6: Select Delete again in the pop-up window, confirming your action. Remove a specific account's contact list One of the drawbacks of adding multiple accounts to your iPhone, like Gmail and Yahoo, is that their contact lists merge together in the Contacts app. The result is one long list that may have multiple entries of the same contact. To reduce this list and purge those unwanted entries, you can disable contact synchronization for each account. Step 1: Tap to open Settings. Step 2: Scroll down and tap Contacts. Step 3: Tap Accounts on the following screen. Step 4: Select an Account. Step 5: Tap the toggle next to Contacts to remove that account's list of contacts from your iPhone. Note: For contacts in Apple's cloud, you'll need to tap iCloud followed by iCloud again to access the Contacts toggle. Use the third-party Groups app If you'd rather not hassle with Apple's iCloud website or disable individual accounts, there's a third-party app that makes the process of deleting multiple contacts easy. It's free to use, but you'll need to pay $10 to unlock all the features and disable the ads. Step 1: Install the Groups app from the App Store. Step 2: Allow Groups to access your contacts. Step 3: Tap on All Contacts displayed at the top. Step 4: Tap on the Circle next to each contact you want to delete. This circle will turn red with a white checkmark. Step 5: Tap Choose Action listed at the top. Step 6: Tap Delete Contacts on the drop-down menu. Step 7: Tap Remove from My iPhone in the pop-up window to confirm.
