Anthology 50-volume of classic works of world literature The Harvard Classics Volumes 1-10 of the Harvard Classics (Southwark Edition) Edited by W. Eliot. Original-Titolo. Shelfpublisher five feet by Eliot. F. COLLIER & SON PUBLICATION DATE 1919 in DUPONT FABRIOD THE HARVARD CLASSICS, originally marketed as a book of five feet

books by Dr. Eliot, is a series of 50 volumes of classic works of world literature, important speeches and historical documents compiled and curated by Harvard President of the University Charles W. Eliot. [1] [2] Eliot believed that a careful reading of the series and following the eleven reading plans included in volume 50 would offer a reader, in the comfort of the house, the benefits of liberal education, entertainment and consultant of the largest minds creative of history. [3] The initial success of the Harvard classics is due, in part, to the branding offered by Eliot and Harvard University. The buyers of these sets were apparently attracted to Eliot's statements. The general index contains over 76,000 references on the subject. [4] [5] [6] The first 25 volumes were published in 1909 followed by the next 25 volumes in 1910. The collection was improved when the lessons on Harvard classics were added in 1914 and fifteen minutes a day - the reading guide of 1916. [7] The lessons on Harvard classics were curated by William A. Neilson, who had witnessed Eliot in the selection and design of the works in volumes 1 - 49. [8] Neilson also wrote the introductions and notes for the selections in volumes 1 - 49. [3] Harvard classics are often described as a "51 volume" set, however, P.F. Collier & Son has constantly marketed the Harvard classics as 50 volumes more lessons and a daily reading guide. Both the Harvard Classics and the five-foot book shelf are brands by P.F. Collier & Son for a series of books used since 1909. [9] [10] Collier advertised Harvard classics in US magazines including which and McClure, offering to send a booklet to potential buyers (and to generate leads for its sellers). The booklet, entitled Fifteen minutes a day-on-reading plan, is a 64-page booklet that describes the advantages of reading, offers the background of the series of books and includes many statements by Eliot because he has undertaken the project in the opuscule, Eliot says: [11] My goal was not to select the best fifty or better one hundred, books in the world, but to give, in twenty-three thousand pages or on a day in historical times, as regards that progress can be depicted in books. The purpose of Harvard's classics is, therefore, different from that of the collections in which the ownership of the publisher was to select a number of better books; It is nothing more than the purpose of presenting a record of the flow of the thought of the world according to which the mind of the observant reader must be enriched, refined and fertilized. Within the limits of fifty volumes, containing about twenty-three thousand pages, my task was to provide the means to obtain such knowledge of ancient and modern literature as it seemed essential for the idea of the twentieth century of a cultivated man. The best acquisition of a cultivated man is a liberal state of mind or a way of thinking; But it must be added to that knowledge of possession with the prodigious shop of discoveries, experiences and recorded reflections that humanity in its intermittent and irregular progress from barbarism to civilization has acquired and established.

Collier & Son in 1909. However, Eliot and Neilson did not make the remaining selections, write the introductions for each selection, or finish the general index until 1910. Consequently, P.F. Collier & I am printing volumes from 1 to 25 in 1909 and volumes from 26 to 50 in 1910. [7] An for the Harvard Classics appeared in Collier's on April 30, 1909, affirming the "complete official contains now ready". [12] With the help of over 50 professors and instructors of Harvard and the General Library of Harvard University and his department libraries, Eliot and Neilson believed that the title "The Harvard Classics" was well deserved. [11] Release and marketing of the book Eliot's letter that describes the selection process in a letter to the publisher, p.7. Collier's, July 24, 1909 in a June 1909 issue by Collier's Weekly. P.F. Collier & I am announced that he would have published a series of books selected by Eliot, without revealing the list of works included, which would be about five feet in length and would have provided readers with liberal training. A few days after the announcement of the intention to publish by Dr. Eliot Five-Foot Shelf of Books, several newspapers have published an incomplete list of selected works to be included. Eliot believed that the publications were not authorized and asked the publishers of Collier's Weekly to publish his letter to publishers explaining the initial list and selection process of 24 July 1909, edition of Collier's. Eliot describes his goal of helping to publish The Harvard Classics as motivated by an educational purpose and explains because the English Bible has not been selected. In January 1910, P.F. Sales were started using 3,000 agents to whom a prospectus or "announcement of the Harvard classics" was provided so that the agent could be followed. [7] Most advertisements encouraged a notice of interest to be sent to the publisher who offers a targeted and successful marketing campaign for the series. The intent of the publisher was to offer the Harvard classics as a subscription with only some of the volumes initially had not yet been provided by Eliot and Neilson to the publisher and others have been provided until the end of 1910.
