Copyright © 2021 InfoSpace Holdings, LLC, a company System1 To make a list of worst animated films can be difficult because there is a question of how much Giù the rabbit hole goes. In particular, with this this Direct-video links out there, some of the movies on this list are definitely not objectively among the worst animated movies ever made. That said, for a major Hollywood release supported by millions of dollars to drop plates on your face, it certainly deserves recognition. So here are 10 of the worst animated movies of all time, which includes a mix of some of the worst of the worst and some of the worst animated blockbuster. 1. Titanic: The Legend Goes On Titanic: The Legend Goes On | Medusa Film Any list of the worst animated movies of all time begins with the Italian animated movie, Titanic: The Legend Goes On. Created on a surprisingly long two-year span, the movie is an obvious attempt to try to capture the thunder from James Cameron's Titanic, which was released three years earlier. He does all his power to offend and deflect the viewers. The movie MidffresAc features a myriad of talking animals aboard the Titanic, including a re-enactment dog (we forget the fact that this takes place in 1912 because it is the least of our worries), stereotypical Mexican mice and bizarre tonal inconsistency. Of course, the nail on the coffin is the refusal of the movie to all respect or give weight to the real tragedy itself – something is made worse by the fact that its directors are not American. 2. FoodFight! Food battle! | VIVA Images on everything related to foodfight! Screen animation second level! - The nice studios think that children will eat regardless, despite the fact that children usually know what is bad. And the boy is that terrible. With actors such as Charlie Sheen, Chris Kattan and Duff Hiliary claiming their voices to a movie, whose premise is surprisingly similar to the recently released sausage party, the movie comes with a horrible animation reminiscent of video game footage in the middle. 4€90 Even the worst jokes and positioning of the bizzateffe product. The only thing worse than looking at is knowing that it costs at least $45 million to do. 3. Mars Needs Moms Mars Needs Moms | Disney While Mars Needs Moms probably not deserving a place on this list when it comes exclusively to critical response (although with a 37% to rotten tomatoes, a conversation can be justified), it deserves a special mention because of its Office Performance box relative to its budget. How much damage was done? On a budget of $150 million, he ended up earning $39 million, making it one of the biggest box office bombs in the history of the movie. But it was also just a movie sore in general that presented a generic and uninteresting storyline and the strangely disturbing 3D motion capture animation featured in movies like Beowulf and the Polar Express that somehow manages to look realistic and fake all at once. 4. The fighter Panda the little fighter Panda | Morningstar Entertainment This small direct-video Gem was born from Brazil and it is an obvious attempt to try to capitalize the Panda of Dreamworks' Kung Fu Panda, which was released the same year. CharacterizedBad animation and a piece stripped from Kung fu panda without good parts, The Little Panda Fighter is almost observable for her terribilites if she wasn't boring mind. 5. Sir Billi Sir Billi | Shoreline Sir Billi (Titled Guardian of the Highlands in the U.S.) represents the role of final acting for Sean Connery, which makes you ask if it was this film that pushed him beyond the limit. The story follows a veterinarian skateboarding in a mission to save Bessie Boo the beaver. The terrible animation of the film is combined with its terribly boring history. 4 € 6 Also the vocal presence of Sean Connery cannot give interest to this tedious, animated, conceptually conceived cartoon function, capable of not setting nor children nor adultsá €, writes the Guardianá € " s Peter Bradshaw. 6. NORM NORT NORM NORTH | Lionsgate Another epic error of Lionsgate's animation division, Nord's Northern Nord is actually the slightest of his concerns, although it was not close to the level of Pixar, Disney, or DreamWorks. The film is a generic company that seems to be a Happy Feet piggyback attempt and an entire slipping of better and more popular animated films. The film follows a polar bear that goes to New York to stop an egoist developer from development in the Arctic. Oh yes, and don't forget the vocal talents of Rob Schneider or the fact that there is twerking involved. 7. Strange Magic Strange Magic | Disney Strange Magic is one of those films that deserves to be in this list because the potential was so high and the end result was so mediocre. With the most beautiful animation of this list by far (unless the CGI movement capture of Mars Needs Moms is your thing,) the problems of the film have more to do with its ridiculous plot, but formulaic, Famous pop songs in musical sequences, and a lack of laughter, which is rather important since it is addressed to children. A passion project by George Lucas, which provided history and co-wrote, Strange Magic is even more evidence than any LUCAS magic once it had long been. 8. Get Squirrely Get Squarely | Signature Entertainment Get Squirrely has not even received the distribution of the United States, despite the fact that it features voice that acts as a strong Will, John Cleese, and John Leguing. Which, of for itself, should tell you how much the reputation of this film is gotten. With the terrible animation, almost-creepy and a generic story of a squirrel that plot to pull a shot in a giant dice factory, all about the film says that you and your children will fall asleep within 10 minutes á € "and it will probably be for the best. 9. SHARK Such SHARK | Dreamworks believe or not, there was a time when Pixar was literally the only studio that made films animated in the street. Entering Shark Tale of 2004, a film released close to Pixará € " s Finding Nemo, approximately the same theme of "talking fish on a wide-scoping adventure." Unfortunately forthey forgot to create an exciting story, leaving it to the balcony in its 35% Rotten tomato score for all eternity. 10. Any sequel to Disney straight-video The Lion King II: Before the sequels and reboots were all the fury for blockbuster exits, Disney had a bad habit of taking their most beloved animated properties, expelling a fraction of the effort they used in the original, and releasing straight follow-ups to video. It is a strategy that has given us the sequels of Tarzan, The Lion King, The Little Mermaid, Beauty and the Beast, Lady and the Tramp, Peter Pan, Cinderella, The Hunchback of Notre Dame and many others. The only problem: each of these films was briefly terrible, and they were little more than a series of blatant cash-grabs from Disney. Further reports by Nick Cannata-Bowman.
