Hi Now that the holidays are over, I'm coming back after the boho bedroom of the girls. And since it is POURING rain right now, it is the perfect time to write on a smart (if I say it myself) under the bed storage bridge. And nothing pulls me up in a scary day like a good fucking Ikea! I used to find all kinds of garbage under the old girls' beds. Books, socks, snacks, call it! It has always been a bit of a pet pea. The space under their beds was not working very hard for us. That's enough! Ikea Mydal Bunkbeds for victory! We have cheap MYDAL bunk beds from Ikea, which I love! (I thought this was the fourth time I was usingspecial beds in a design?) We used them for the first time in the castle room of the house on the beach. They are great because they are cheap, very functional, and beautiful as-is, or you can end up as you like! But you will notice that there is a big gap under the lower bed. And even if it would have done a good hiding place, I wanted to maximize storage space in this small bedroom. Hennes under Ikea bed storage boxes has these Hennes under the bed storage boxes. They are basically rolling drawers, and fit perfectly under the Mydal bunk bed. The problem? They do not come in a wood finish. And they don't close to Mydal bed because of the scale. Never fear! I have a simple hack to make these under the bed storage boxes work with the Mydal bunk bed. Here's what you'll need: 1. Sand front drawer with 40 sandpaper When I bought the Hennes under the storage boxes of the bed, I expected the drawer fronts to have dark gray finish on them, and the rest of the drawer boxes would be unfinished pine. Not really. All the pieces were finished in dark gray, so I smoothed them all. But if I had done it again, I would have just removed the finish from the fronts of the drawer to save a lot of time and a greasy elbow! The lower the number of grain on the sandpaper, the more rough it is. This means that it will remove a lot of material from your wood quickly, which is what we want. We will start with 40 grit.2. Sand with 80 grit SandpaperNext, there will be sand with sandpaper 80 grit.more fine, and will create a smoother finish.3. sand with 120 sandpaper Finally, sand with 120 grit. That's all right. There should be no black or gray spots left when you are all done.4. Assemble drawers Follow the instructions I came with your Hennes drawers to assemble them, and put them under the bunk bed.5. cut the staircase to castle Now you can see that the storage drawers are almost a perfect fit under the bed. The only thing that comes to mind is the bottom of the left side of the staircase in a bunk bed, which does not allow the drawer to close the whole path. (If you assemble the bunk bed the other direction, the staircase will be at a different point, but you will still have the same problem. We marked the bottom of the scale with a pencil, and we used a multi-tool oscillating to cut about one thumb on the bottom of the scale. And this allows the drawer to slip across the street. Here, we're done! We are using the space drawer under the children's beds to store clothes for now. But these drawers can also be used for clothes, toy storage, extra bed linen, or anything. When it comes to children's room storage, you can never have too much! A.B. Purple SetsC. Printed sheets OpalhouseD. We used this same under the storage of the bed IKEA hack in the house bunk room on the beach. The only difference was that we spotted the drawers to match the bunk beds.
