manufacturers how samples can be made and how they should be. The samples used that what I viewed as possible to manufacture, and as the samples become larger and more sophisticated, we increasingly approach the final aesthetics of the work art. This design development process takes more time by developing new ways of working, challenging existing production modes and changing the normal ways of doing things, a large part of my practice is being very involved in the manufacturing process, certainly, I have a vision, but I also like to get involved in the manufacturing process, to make unexpected decisions about color and shape during making, see this post in the install a post shared by @artglassolutions after the customer has signed the design and samples are developed, production canDuring this period, I arrive, figuratively speaking, "got in" the work of art. I am no longer looking for an image or a computer screen, but working inside the artwork, surrounded by structures and samples, and fully immersed in the process of making.Á Èven during this making process, I am repeatedly experimenting with different components, placements and making visuals of the completed artwork within the space to ensure everythingÁ Áwill materialise the way I have envisioned.READ:Á ÁCreative Capital: The Singapore brick artist who built a business using LegoÁ Á Once all the components are complete, we can begin the on-site installation. I have realised that we should always do aÁ Ápre-installationÁ Á off-site to ensure itÁ Álooks the wayÁ Á I expected it to look, and to avoid difficult and costly changes requiredÁ Á on-site.Á Á This also lets the installers learnÁ Á how to handle the glass, fix attachments and position the artwork. If there is no chance to do an off-site installation,Á Á I usually install a sample piece eÁÁÁ a life-size versionÁ Á in a different materialÁ Á perhaps eÁÁÁ to check position, size and layout. Barbara Jane Cowie working with hot glass. (Photo: Art Glass Solutions) WHAT IS THE MOST CHALLENGING INSTALLATION YOU HAVE DONE?The most challenging installation I have completed, and one of the largestÁ Á to date, is Complex SimplicityÁ Á at the Ocean Financial Centre in 2013. It was so big, it was necessary for me to design and develop aÁ Á structure to support the wall, the sculptural wall finish and the 999 glass fish.It wasÁ Á important that the artwork flowedÁ Á as itsÁ Á focus was on the "movement" of the fish swimming.Á Á The exact angle and distance from the wall for each fish wereÁ Á decided during installation, butÁ Á theÁ Á brackets thatÁ Á held eachÁ Á fish needed to be confirmed before installation.In addition, I wanted the fish and bracketsÁ Á to be a seamless fit eÁÁÁ and for the bracketsÁ Á to be part of the design aesthetics. Furthermore, the brackets needed to be easy to remove for maintenance. ARE THERE ART SCHOOLS IN SINGAPORE OFFERING COURSES IN GLASSMAKING TODAY?To my knowledge, there are no other formal educational facilities offering glassmaking courses in Singapore right now. Lasalle, before moving its campus, began to refocus away from the applied arts, shifting Jewellery into Design, Ceramics into Sculpture, and closing down Glass altogether.The crafts and glass departments in higher educational institutions worldwide are closing, too. It is the trend as IT, web design, programming and computer designing courses become increasingly popular. New technology naturally offers more career options for graduates. Applied arts courses require extensive materials and equipment to run, thus, they are expensive, especially if there are only a few students interested to learn. View this post on Instagram Á post shared by @artglassolutions Over the past 15 years, I have continued to teach in studios and glass schools in Europe and Australia.Á Á And as I see more university courses close, I notice anÁ Á increase inÁ Á private studios opening up for classes and opportunities for hobbyists.ARE YOU MORE FOCUSED ON STUDIO PRACTICE AND TEACHING, OR DO YOU STILL TAKE ANOÁ Á COMMERCIAL PROJECTS?Currently, my focus is on teaching and opening a new hot glass studio for the publicÁ Á in Singapore. Training others with a similar passion for art making and glassmaking is my current goal, so that others may take on the role of the teacher or trainer. Offering a diverse selection of courses that allow novices to learn new skills, andÁ Á Áuse a different side of their brains is the essence of my current focus on enrichment and experience.Nevertheless, my passion remains for art glass Esu-er dna dna saw yes yem ew t t woh dna ,yad yreve eropagnis otni detropi Ássalg hcum WohÁ Á .Ássalg elcyeer ot t the tawh tuoba otñit of eht eht Eveá á,sgdnifer# because ener sluser eht gnitsopá á á yreve koww dna u otá á,noitavitomo taerg htiw O3 sruoh Dediced I .oiducs emoh evah yltnevnoc i sa .osá á.,degreme á á,Éllahad03#á á.s'dnifer ROF ÁEdi Eht ÿ,Ássalg snouts snotent) rof srucor tñempoleved Ássenisisusubusen na ekakatreñ dna ,yad yreve Áessalc agoy htiw fleým dñetxe ot eht eht eht ot noised eht gnamy im Ásá's fly sigs. Some exciting plans for 2021? The most exciting project in 2021 is to build a hot glass school in Singapore, where teaching, learning and enrichment is the goal. While we look more closely at home during this normal new, offering the opportunity to learn something new like Glass Hot is an interesting and exciting opportunity for many. The sensation of admiration about this hot wool material, make a dan of it and gain skills to create functional and decorative art from glass is exciting. , or a glass plate to bring some color to home, offering others the opportunity to work with glass is a large part of my next new adventure - and my journey and development containing as an artist, educator and glass creator .
