How to connect toshiba ct-8069 smart tv to wifi

I have a Toshiba smart TV that was connected to the internet at one time. I switched providers, couldn't get anything in my house to connect, then switched back to the original provider. Ever since the switch, the TV is the only device that won't connect. I have a Netgear router that is password protected, and every time I try connecting I input the exact password. I can sit in the same room as the TV and my laptop, phone and iPod connect with no problem. The router is in the next room, approximately 15-20 feet away. When I do the Assisted setup, my wifi shows up in the list, but says there is a medium signal. Once I put in the password, it takes approximately 2 minutes then says it couldn't connect. I've tried the manual set up, as well, but I'm not certain I'm choosing the right options for Authentication and Encryption. Any suggestions?? I'm not super tech savvy, but can figure out the basics. Any help is greatly appreciated. 0 you should probably start by finding the default ip and access password for your router and open it in a computer browser and check the settings inside ... there you can usually see the devices connected to it etc... try to figure out something from in there, then again you might want to consult the manual of the router if you are not tech savvy... alot of different connection settings in there, and as a strong recommendation - do not use the wifi on the tv at all - connect via lan cable if you have that option, everything will work much better than with the wifi... 0 is there a way to reset the wifi config like reset to default on your tv? try resetting the TV to manufacture defaults and try again. wifi adapter on your tv may have issues obtaining dhcp... 0 I just reset the TV and it still won't connect. It says to check the AP configuration and try again. How do I do that? -2 reset your router / or an access point if you have it. 0 you should probably start by finding the default ip and access password for your router and open it in a computer browser and check the settings inside ... there you can usually see the devices connected to it etc... try to figure out something from in there, then again you might want to consult the manual of the router if you are not tech savvy... alot of different connection settings in there, and as a strong recommendation - do not use the wifi on the tv at all - connect via lan cable if you have that option, everything will work much better than with the wifi... Page 2 Hello I'm searching for a better wireless internet provider in terms of efficiency and price as my last provider had a lot of issues also I live in a relatively small town. I want to be able to play online games like moons or fps with hardly to no interruptions with 2 smartphones surfing the web. Also would it be a good idea to buy a wireless router and how would it work for my provider to send service to it? All helps is very appreciated! 0 you should really be asking "what is the best ISP in your area", wifi is the same as just using internet through cable; but, the data is transferred using invisible frequency 2.4ghz/5.0ghz 0 in view of the nature of your opening question, it would also be a good idea to post where you are in the world, wouldn't it? 0 you should really be asking "what is the best ISP in your area", wifi is the same as just using internet through cable; but, the data is transferred using invisible frequency 2.4ghz/5.0ghz Page 3 Ok I have 3 wifi adapters. All 3 are usb adapters. One old netgear b/g that is not made for win8, which installs but cannot see not one network in windows8. Second is a "Belkin N150 Wireless USB Adapter" Im not at home, but this looks just like mine. Then its brand new from walmart and has windows8 supported drivers. Same issue cannot see not one network in windows8. Third is a "Rosewill RNWD-N1501UB" that has windows8 driver support. Same issue cannot see not one network in windows8. Same issue on 2 totally different computers running win8 64-bit. If I put any of these into my vista32bit system and they all work and pick up the wifi signal. If I use my phone or any other device like my IP camera, I can connect and see my network. Along with any of my neighbors connections. But with my 2 win8-64bit computers. I cannot even see 1 connection to connect to. Only running spybot/zonealarm for security. No anti-virus or other measurs. Ive turned both completely off. I've also tried to install third party wifi software. Those programs you use instead of connection thru windows, which did not work. Any ideas why this is not working? One my win8 computers is built by me. The other is a HP vendor PC. If I hardline, then both will connect. Every install of the drivers goes smooth and no noticeable problems. Except it will not auto install like it does with vista, I must have the driver downloaded myself. Thanks for any suggestions. how to connect toshiba ct-8069 smart tv to internet. how to connect toshiba ct-8069 tv to wifi. how to connect toshiba ct-8069 to wifi. how to connect toshiba ct-8533 smart tv to wifi
