In text Referencing

(also known as 'Harvard' referencing)

Introduction

In text referencing is essential to show where you have used ideas and information from other sources in your academic work. The DUT Harvard Referencing guide is available and can be downloaded from the library website. Find it linked on the Guides and Tutorials drop down menu. 0 selected Add some references from the sources along the top. Welcome to Cite This For Me! Our free tools are designed to help you quickly prepare an entire bibliography or reference list in three simple steps: 1. Add references or citations. 2. Choose your citation style. 3. Add the bibliography to your paper. It's that easy! Whether you're just starting your paper, or trying to finish it up the night before it's due, Cite This For Me is here for you, 24/7. Even if you know very little about references, our forms and automatic citation features will guide you through the process and tell you what information is needed. This means less guessing for you and more accurate citations! Nearly any style you can think of is supported by Cite This For Me, including APA format, MLA format, Chicago style, Harvard referencing, Vancouver, and thousands of others. As you make citations, each will appear one after another, so you can keep track of what you've cited and edit anything you may have missed. When you've finished your bibliography, copy and paste it into your paper or, if you upgrade to our Cite This For Me Premium subscription, you can download it to Microsoft Word. On top of downloading citations to Microsoft Word, you will be able to save your work, create as many bibliographies as you want, and work faster with no ads. Premium accounts also let you check your paper for accidental plagiarism, so you can be more confident when turning it in. Cite This For Me is one of the most popular citation tools today. Launched in October 2010, we began with the mission of helping students create perfect citations in a fraction of the time. Since then, Cite This For Me has assisted millions of users across the world including in the United Kingdom, United States, Australia, and beyond. Why Citing Matters Citing isn't something you usually think about, but it's important nonetheless. Without even realizing it, you do it already in your everyday life in little ways. Have you ever said, "I heard on XYZ News that . . ." or "I read in XYZ News that those two celebrities are dating," or even "Mom said that you can't do that." By saying where you got your information, you are casually citing a source. We do this because it gives credibility to what we say, but also because it credits the originator of the information and allows others to follow up if they need more information. Formal citing done for papers and projects takes this a step further. In addition to the reasons mentioned above, citing sources in academia provides evidence of your research process and helps you avoid plagiarism. Plagiarism is a word you never want to hear describing your work. You've probably seen headlines in the news and heard stories in school about the negative consequences of plagiarism. It's not good, but it is preventable. By visiting Cite This For Me to create citations, you're taking steps to help avoid this. What Are You Citing? Source Type Options Do you know what you're citing? Answering this question is usually the first step in creating a citation. On Cite This For Me, you can choose from a list of 30+ source types. It doesn't matter if you're citing a website, book, video, online image, or something totally different. Cite This For Me has covered. How Does This Work? Immediately start citing by clicking on the website or journal article icon. If you're using another source type, like book, click "More" to see all available options. From there, a form will pop up and show you all of the information you should look for in your source. Remember: the information for sources can vary (e.g. one photo may have a title, another photo may have none), so the forms do not require a completely filled out form to add a reference. You can create a citation at any time and also go back and edit it as many times as you want. To help you save even more time and effort when citing products, books, and journal articles, Cite This For Me automatically finds reference information and fills out some of the form for you. It sounds like a school myth but it's true! When citing these sources, you start off with a search bar that assists you in finding the source you are referencing. Once you select the appropriate source from the listed results, you'll be shown what information was and was not found and then taken directly to the form. Here you can confirm, edit, and add any information before adding the reference to your list. You're always in control and have the final say on what references. Choosing Style Odds are, you've been given a specific citation style, but you need a publication date, or other details. If not, try MLA or APA citation styles. Cite This For Me knows the majority of them in the navigation bar, including Chicago, Vancouver, and other details. Cite This For Me citation guide covers a lot of the additional information, so your paper is more properly prepared and less likely to get points taken off for these details. The citation guides cover several citation styles, but the most popular are APA, Chicago Manual of Style, MLA, Harvard referencing, Norms APA and Norms ABNT. Take a Break & Learn: Read Our Blog Citing is great, but it isn't the most exciting thing in the world. If you've cited so much that your eyes are getting crossed, take a break and check out our blog! We cover questions about citing and writing that you've always wondered about, and you will have fun along the way. Keep up with the latest articles by following us on Facebook or Twitter. Cite As You Search With Our Chrome Add-on Use Google Chrome? If yes, add our intuitive Chrome add-on and gain the power to automatically cite a webpage when you're actually on it! Whenever you are on a page you wish to use as a source, simply click the Cite This For Me extension button to generate a citation for it. It's quick, easy, and free! Click here to get the add-on. Finished and Ready To Go Once you have completed your bibliography or reference list, it's time to export it! You can copy and paste your citations from Cite This For Me into your paper, project, or document. If you're looking to export it as a Word Doc, Cite This For Me premium access is perfect for you! In addition to the perks already mentioned, you'll also gain access to our plagiarism check. It helps you identify any information that may still need a citation created for it. In the text of your work, when you refer to ideas or information you have read and used in your assignment. The use of this term reflects your original source.

The author/date, or Harvard, style of referencing is widely accepted in academic publications, although you may see a number of variations in the way it is used.

This style of referencing requires that you acknowledge the source of your information or ideas.

In the text of your work, when you refer to ideas or information you have read and used in your assignment. Each reference is followed by including the author and date of the publication referred to, or cited.

In a reference list at the end of your text, which gives the full details of the works you have referred to, or cited.

In text referencing

You may acknowledge the source of your information or ideas within the text of your work in various ways.

Quotation

You may quote the author's exact words to support your argument. You may not quote large parts of a text, or a passage like that below and quote specific words or phrases, not the whole paragraph.

Except when creating key three-dimensional roles such as Gruah in The Caucasian Chalk Circle and Mother Courage in the play of the same name, you will usually have to create complex characterisation when performing in a Brecht play.

Crawford, J.L. et al. (2003) Acting in Person and its Style, Australia: McGraw-Hill, Australia.

The first example below places emphasis on the writer, the second on the idea.

Example:

Crawford et al. (2003, p.218) suggest that 'characterisation is not complex in Brecht's plays.'

...you will usually not have to create complex characterisation when performing in a Brecht play.

(Crawford et al. 2003, p.218).

DIT Library Harvard Quick Guide

This handset is a quick guide to using the Harvard referencing style. Examples are given on how to correctly reference the most commonly used sources such as books, journal articles, websites, newspapers, videos and photographs. There are also examples of how to reference a quote and reference examples are also given.

Whether you are quoting (using an author's exact words) or paraphrasing (giving an author's idea into your own words) you still need to give credit to that author. Need a bit more help? Get in touch with us at cite@city.dit.ie

There are two parts to Harvard referencing:

In-text Citation

Give enough basic information about the original source so that your reader can track down the original source.

In-text Citation Examples

In-text citation for paraphrase

One of the elements that distinguishes Miuccia Prada's fashion is its preoccupation with ugliness. It dismantles the conventional understanding of what makes something beautiful

(Prada, cited in Geczy & Karaminas 2017). A key example of this is her collection for Spring/Summer 1996, where she used fabrics and colours that were associated with the domesticity of the 1950s. According to Prada (cited in Geczy & Karaminas 2017, p. 64), it was 'an exercise in elevating ordinary commonplace patterns.'
