I'm really interested to know if ranged hunter specs are now beco Outlaw is the rogue spec that is probably affected the most by the caps. Blade Flurry damage has been buffed but the cap will be noticeable in heavy AoE situations. Ultimately, the caps are a balancing approach by Blizzard and it remains to be seen (and depends on other specs and classes) how well it plays out So, i played rogue first time with this character so i'm still kinda confused with some stuff. So, i am casual/chill player, i won't do PvP hardcore or mythics, raids or anything. I just like to chill around the place doing stuff that i want to do. I played from IvI 20 to 120 as outlaw. At one point i wanted to try assassination, i loved it. Wonderful poisons and bleeds. It was very hard. For world PvP? I'd say rogue, probably subtly spec. Although not often seen in PyP. Combat Roques have access to the same utility skills as the other specs, so the keybindings should not only focus on damage. The Subtlety Rogue is a master of shadowy crafts and all things stealthy In World of Warcraft healers have to die. This is a cruel truth that you're taught very early in the game. This add-on helps you influence this unfortunate destiny in a way or another depending on the healer's side., PVP Roque Specs - Mutilate Prep. By Dcruize - Posted on May 1, 2009 Posted in: Archive, Uncategorized UPDATE - Feb 2010 While mutilate specs are still viable (and sometimes preferred because of the lack of dots you put on your target.) Master Poisoner is now the main spec seen in arenas There's a lot of new gear coming so let's have an in-depth look at AQ loot and which pieces you should prio getting first. Firstly, if you haven't seen the Darkmantle guide, I posted the P5 bis lists at the bottom of that guide, but I'll guickly go over them again here for quick reference before we go over the roque loot prio for AQ/Phase 5 items All specs included.
