Let us take a look at the most dangerous mountains in the world and so lethal that it is the stories of survival that bleed from their treacherous slopes or the visions of courage that gather in the mind, the most dangerous mountains in the world continue to make news all over the world. These mountains have a morbid charm for mountaineers, climbers and news junkies. I'm no different. My libraries, Kindle and my film collection are full of books and films of climbing and the tragic stories they tell. It's this charm that led me to explore the most dangerous mountains in the world and what makes them deadly. It has not been a single empirical study on the most dangerous mountains in the world. As such, I relied on a combination of statistics and a broader reputation. The list is therefore subjective by nature, but offers a reliable overview of the most dangerous mountains in the world. These are not necessarily the highest, the most technical or the most remote. Sometimes the opposite is true: convenience, negligence and overcrowding can lead to higher mortality rates at the least technical peaks. From the imposing eight thousand to the lesser known hills, the most dangerous mountains in the world appear in all shapes and sizes. Sometimes it is the weather conditions, whether they are avalanches, strong winds or surprise storms that make a mountain truly insidious. 1. Nanga Parbat Altitude:8126m Location: PakistanDistance: Himalaya Dreamstime Il Nanga Parbat was once known as Killer Mountain Don't be fooled by the beauty of this mountain: Nanga Parbat is a notoriously difficult climb and was once known as the "murderous mountain". Nanga Parbat had a surprising death rate of 77% which means that the sumers were more likely to die than to survive! Since then the mortality rate has decreased, but is still considered the third most dangerous peak after Annapurna and K2. Until 2016, it had not been climbed in winter and continues to reap victims. Surrounded by idyllic forests and glacial lakes, the deadly mountain rises with a huge vertical relief from the serene ground surrounding it. 2. Monte Bianco Altitude: 4.808m Locality: France / Italian Distance: Alps From Dream Il Monte Bianco has seen more deaths than any other mountain Il Monte Bianco is probably the most dangerous mountain in the world. The mountain has so far harvested well 8,000* dead, killed more people than any other mountain and the victims continue to arrive. A comfortable and relatively technical mountain like Mount Bianco shouldn't be so dangerous. At least this is the logic behind 20.000 hikers looking for the highest peak of Western Europe every year. At the peak of the climbing season, 300 climbers per day try to reach the summit, overcrowding and carelessness, with up to 100 climbers dying every year on the White Mountain. The 1994 1994 The High Mountains of the Alps, claims between 6.000 and 8.000 dead occurred on Mount White. Three. The elevation of Eiger: 3.967m (13015ft)Position: Switzerland Range: Alps The famous Nordwand is one of the three great faces north of the Alps The largest of the six great faces north of the Alps, the northern face of the Eiger (the Ogre), like its counterparts, is known for its technical challenge contrary to its height. At'only'3967m (13015ft), it is not the height that has supported at least 64 climbers' lives since the first successful climb in the 1938. The famous Nordwand (German for the north wall) together with the northern faces of Cervino and the Grandes Jorasses make up the "Trilogy", a subset of the six great northern faces that differ from the others to be even more difficult and more dangerous to conquer. In recent years, with more and more climbs and records stumbling, Eiger's threatening reputation has somehow dissipated. However, the legend of Mordwanda (the wall of murder) still sends the chills along the spine of a climber. Four. Baintha Brakk Elevation: 7285m (23901ft)Position: PakistanRange: Karakoram Ben Tubby: CC BY 2.0 The Ogre is famous for being one of the toughest peaks to climb Baintha Brakk also known as the Ogre is famous for being one of the toughest peaks in the world to climb. Incomprehensible of modern climbing, 24 years between the first mountain climb in the 1977 and the second in 2001. During the first climb of the 1977's, made by Doug Scott and Chris Bonington, Scott broke both legs while Bonington broke two ribs and contracted pneumonia. There have been relatively few deaths on the mountain, but there have been countless casualties and more than twenty failed attempts between the two successful expeditions. Despite the relatively low mortality rate, Baintha Brakk continues to claim lives when making attempts and as such is widely considered one of the most dangerous mountains in the world. Five. Kangchenjunga Elevation: 8586m (28169ft)Location: Nepal/ IndiaRange: Himalaya Dreamstime Since the 1990s, about 22% of the peaks have died on Kangchenjunga, which is located on the Indian-Nepal border. Kangchenjunga is the highest mountain in India, the second highest in Nepal and the third highest in the world. Since the 1990s, about 22% of the peaks (about one in five) have died on Kangchenjunga, making it one of the most dangerous mountains in the world. At least 53 deaths were recorded on Kangchenjunga, including five in 2013 and three in 2014. The Kangchenjunga area is a deeply remote region and has only recently opened to tourism. The mountain itself is not highly technical, but it has been mounted only 283 times, making it the second climb of the eight thousand after the dangerous and brutal Annapurna. Six. Elevation of the Cervino: 4.478m (14.692ft)Location: Switzerland Range: Dreamstime Alps Cervino is one of the most iconic mountains in the world Another of the tree194; 160? great faces north of the Alps, Cervino is one of the most iconic mountains in the world. It is often said that it is responsible for the birth of Alpinism in the middle of the 19th century, the iconic peak pyramid is crowned with success by thousands of climbers every year with up to 150 who every day try to climb during the peak season. Over the years, the mountain has claimed more than 500160; lives making it one of the most lethal mountains in the world in terms of the number of deaths. He also has his own cemetery. In recent years, the mountain has become safer with an average of five climbers dying on its slopes every year since the early 1990s, starting from an average of eight years before. Seven. Cerro Torre Elevation: 3128m (10262ft)Location: Argentina194; ChileRange: Andes194; Dreamstime Cerro Torre juts vertically from the Patagonian ice field The famous Cerro Tower is not only dangerous in a narrow sense, but also deeply controversial. The dispute began in the 1959 when Caesar was master 160; claimed to have successfully climbed the mountain. However, his partner Tomi Egger had fallen in his death along with the camera that showed their successful rise. When every subsequent expedition to Cerro Torre in the following years failed, leading to further death in the process, doubts arose about the Master128; The summit. This has started a long sequence of controversial events. Regardless of the controversy, it can be said that Cerro Torre, a pure and sharp pinnacle jutting vertically from the Patagonian ice field, fortified with a dangerous layer of ice and buffalo winds, is one of the most dangerous mountains in the world. Eight. Mt. Washington Elevation: 1916m (6288ft)Location: New Hampshire, USARange: Presidential rank Dreamstime Mt. Washington could be the highest peak in the United States of East, but should have been considered much more than a hill anywhere else in the world. However, it is a dangerous hill. Since 1849's, nearly 150 people have died on Mt. Washington. The mountain receives unusually high wind speeds for that part of the world and the difference between hikes in summer and winter is serious. Bad planning often leads to poorly prepared hikers for climate change. Nicholas Howe, author of Not Without Peril: 150 Years of Misadventure on the Presidential Range of New Hampshire, said that people often fail to appreciate the time difference between Boston and the mountains is 9th. Annapurna Elevation: 8091m (26545ft)Location: NepalRange: Himalaya Dreamstime The massive Annapurna is reserved for the best climbers Annapurna is the tenth highest and one of the most dangerous mountains in the world. It is usually referred to as 160; the most dangerous of the citizens of eight million people because © for a long time had the highest fatality rate -a-summit and also low global summits (in March 2012, this was at the summits of 191 and 61 61 Since the 1990s, however, Kangchenjunga has had a higher mortality rate. However, Annarpurna I and the larger Annapurna massif are a very dangerous place to go climbing. The bulkhead is usually limited to stairs 194; 160? reserved only for the best climbers of the 194; 160? only a few of these 194's; 160? 160. Ten. Everest Elevation:194; 160? 8,88m (29029ft)Location: 194D Nepal /ChinaRange:194; Himalaya Dreamstime To date, at least 297 people have died on Everest despite being the highest mountain on Earth, st is by no means the most dangerous mountain or more climbing technique. However, the pure charm of being at the top of the world means people with high fever crowd the mountain is 128; I climbed. With more and more permission to climb Everest issued every year (373 were issued in 2017 as much as possible), they expect scenes like this conga line of climbers on Everest to continue. In May 2018, it is believed that at least the 297s died on Mount Everest. It may not be the hardest, the most demanding or the most dangerous, but it is the 194; 160? is194; The highest mountain in the world. Until it changes, people will continue to climb, to die, on Everest making it one of the most dangerous mountains in the world. 11. K2 Elevation: 8611m (28251ft)Location:194; 160? Pakistan / ChinaRange;; 160? Karakoram Dreamstime K2 is known as Savage Mountain A mere19; Mention of this legend is enough to make a statement; 128? Blood runs cold. K2 is known as the Wild Mountain due to the extremely difficult ascent and the second highest fatality rate among the trillions. With about 300- plus summits and 77 fatalities, about one in four climbers di e on the slopes of this treacherous mountain. Unlike Annapurna, the mountain with the highest mortality rate, K2 has never been climbed during the winter. Until this year, only two deaths were reported the first after 2014. However, over the decades, the mountain has been a scene of multiple catastrophes, namely the194 catastrophe; 160? 1986 K2 when five climbers died in a single event (13 during the season), the 1995 K2 disaster when six others died (eight in the season) and more recently, the 2008 K2 disaster when an 11-rocking climber lost his life in a single event. With this in mind, it is certainly only a matter of time before the next catastrophe on K2, one of the most dangerous mountains in the world, takes place. Did you like this post?
