My samsung tv has sound and no picture

After a long and hard day, you finally sit down to take your favorite show. But when you press the power button on the remote, the TV screen remains black! Try to press the remote control power button again from each corner, but there is still no image. If this sounds familiar, you probably fell victim to one or more TV screen issues. Here are a few ways to learn what can be causing the TV screen to stay black when powered. What to check If the TV has no photo before, it is important to check if the remote is the problem. Try turning on the TV using the power button around the screen. If you turn on a photo, the remote could be the problem. Still no pictures? Try to raise the volume and keep an ear out for what happens. TV screen is black and there is no sound If you tried to turn the TV all the way and there is still no sound or image, we recommend you check a LED light or a small spy telling you that the TV has power. If there is no power for the TV while it is connected, there may be a problem with the socket or the fuse box in the house. If the power indicator light is active, there may be a problem with TV software. Disconnect the TV from the wall and, if possible, remove the power cord from the back of the TV to perform a soft reset. Wait 30 seconds, and connect the TV into a job hold to test it again. TV screen is black but audio works If your TV screen goes black, but the sound still works, then the problem to be a little more complicated. Here are some things you can check to help diagnose the potential problem. check the TV input if there is no image showing on the screen, the first thing to check is the input source. Whether it's a cable box or a video game system, make sure it's on and running properly. connect the device to several doors on TV to see if the door is the problem. If the problem persists, try connecting other devices to the TV or switching from one input setting to another. modify the problems of the hdmi cable with the TV display can be caused by a faulty hdmi cable. Although the hdmi cable does not appear damaged, it can work due to a short or regular oura and tear. try testing the hdmi cable on another TV to see if the same problem occurs. Alternatively, try to oate a different hdmi cable on the malfunctioning television. control the backlight some TV screens, such as LCD screens, use a backlight to illuminate the image. If the backlight burns or stops working, the image will appear black. to see if the backlight of the TV is causing the problem, make sure the TV is on, and turn off the lights in the room. Shine a flashlight on the screen to see if there is an image. If you can see a photo with the flashlight, then the backlight of the TV is burned. If this is the case, you can consider upgrading to a new smart TV or contact your local Rent-A-Center for free repairs and temporary replacements of your Rent-A-Center items.to do if your TV screen is black You run all tests, checked all doors, and secured the TV is connected and has power. But what can you do if the TV screen is still black? With TVs rented by Rent-A-Center, you could easily request free service and repairs, but if you did not get television at Rent-A-Center, repair costs could get quite expensive! My TV is a Samsung UE32F6200. They had it about 2 months but it was purchased as a used item. It was on, connected to a decoder and working well when the image suddenly left. It could still hear the audio from the cable box or from the menu inputs. After that he turned on again but the problem remains. When connected but off with the remote control, the stand by light is lit and red. When I turn it on with the remote, the light flashes about 5 times and then remains off, but no image shows up. It's on if, because if I make menu inputs, I can faintmenu options from my room light falling on TV. I also hear the menu selections. If I turn it off with the remote, the red light is on again. Another television connected to the same decoder works well with sound and audio. Please, you know what might happen to my TV? I usually leave it connected even if switched off with the remote when not in use. The source of light or LED may have exploded. You must contact a repairer to solve this problem. The source of light or LED may have exploded. You must contact a repairer to solve this problem. Uh, I didn't think I had to deal with this TV issue so soon. You're gonna have to contact a repairer, I guess. Thank you so much for your help. Tell me, however, that my departure is connected to most of the time has something to do with this?
