an adverb clause is a collection of words in a phrase that acts as an adverb. the function of the clause is to modify or provide detailed information on adjectives, verbs and adverbs. in simple terms, an adverb clause adds information that describes how the action took place in a sentence. For example, it can explain when, where, and how the action took place in a sentence. adverb clauses what is an adverb clause? an adverb clause, also known as an adverbial clause, includes a subject and a verb, and that is why not every word of group is an adverb clause. at the beginning of each adverb clause, there is a subordinate conjunction. Subordinated conjunction examples include: after, though, why, and if. a phrase consisting of a group word that works as an adverb and does not include a subject and a verb, then it is an adverb phrase. What are the clauses adverb? an adverb clause is used in a sentence to add relevant and descriptive information to your content. adverb clauses are quite flexible as they can be used in different parts of a sentence. For example, they can be placed at the beginning, at the center or at the end of a sentence, on the basis of where they fit perfectly. the position of adverb clauses adverb clause at the beginning of a sentence when an adverb clause is placed at the beginning of a sentence, it is usually followed by a comma. This is illustrated in the following examples: whether you like it or not, you must attend afternoon lessons. Unless you're sorry, you'll be punished. unless you put more effort in your studies, it will not excel. adverb clause at the center of a sentence paragraphs separate the adverb clause in the middle of the sentence. this is not the usual presentation since there is a break of the most important thought, an example of this is illustrated below: dogs, even if they bark, cannot scare visitors. james, even if it isn't maths, he can't mark everything. Chocolate, due to its low basspoint, it can never be used to cook. Adverb clause at the end of a sentence When placed at the end of the sentence, an adverb clause does not require any additional punctuation. Examples of this include: You have to keep practicing the song until you understand. Call us when you get past Melbourne. The day was so long because we were completely inactive. You have to stay calm even if something doesn't go as planned. I will not allow you to watch the video clip even if you are 18 years old and above. I didn't know how good life was until I met you. Keep in mind to check for a subject and verb if you are not sure if a group of words is an adverb clause or not. If it is composed of a verb and a subject and answers the question when, where, as then is an adverb clause. You should always remember to use adverb clauses correctly since they add more descriptive information, thus bringing relevance to your work and making it useful as much as possible. The adverbial clauses are grouped into the following categories: Place Adverb Clauses Time Adverb Clauses Adverb Clauses Case Adverb Clauses Purpose Adverb Clauses Condition Adverb Clauses Place Clauses Response to the application where. An example of this could be: Where there's a party, there's fun. Adverb Time clauses Response to the question when. An example of this could be: When the referee prepares the final whistle, all players left the field. After the exams, we'll leave all the school compound. Adverbi Clause di Causa They answer the question why. An example of this could be: He won the race because he had done enough practice. She was arrested because she stole the neighbor's umbrella. Adverbi Purpose clauses also apply to the question why. An example of this could be: Eat a balanced diet every day to stay healthy.two glasses of water after every day because the doctor advised him to do so. clauses of adverb ofThey answer the question as. An example could be: You can buy a new house if you save money. Unless you work hard, you're not gonna do well in your exams. Adverb clauses are more complex than common ones, but they are significant when it comes to adding more information to writing by explaining how and why things happen. Adverbi image adverbi can perform a wide range of functions: can modify verbs, adjectives and other adverbs. They can come before or after the word they change. In the following examples, the adverbs are bold, while the words they change are in lanes (the rather beautiful man): The desk is made of industrial steel particularly resistant to corrosion. The power company uses huge generators that are generally turned by steam turbines. Jaime won the race, because he ran quickly. This fence has been installed smoothly. It must be done. An adverb may provide information on the modes, place, time, frequency, certainty or other circumstances of the activity indicated by the verb. Some examples, where the adverb is still bold and the modified words are in italics: Suzanne sang strong (loudly modifies the sung verb, indicating the way to sing) We left it here (here it changes the phrase of the verb that left it, indicating the place) I worked yesterday (the day of yesterday modifies the worked verb, indicating the time) I has done so without doubt (doubtly alters the phrase of the verb, indicating certainty) Often errors are made (often alters the verbal phrase commit errors, indicating frequency) They can also change the phrases of the nouns, prepositional sentences, or whole clauses or phrases, as in the following examples. Once again the adverbs are bold, while the words they change are in lanes. I bought only the fruit (change only the noun phrase theRoberto has taken us almost to the station (almost changes the prepositional phrase to the station) Of course we must act (certainly alters the sentence as a whole) complex)the adverbs of these paragraphs: Mass extinctions are insanely catastrophic, but important, events that punctuate the history of life on Earth. The Jurassic/Cretaceous border was originally designed to represent a mass extinction, but was later "reevaluated" to a minor extinction event based on new discoveries. However, compared to other important stratigraphic boundaries, such as the end-Triax or the end-Cretaceous, the Jurassic/Cretaceous border remains very little understood. Intensives and graduation adverbs can also be used as adjective modifiers, and other adverbs, often to indicate the degree. Here are some examples: You are right (adverb modifies enough adjective right) Milagros is exceptionally beautiful (adverb modifies exceptionally beautiful adjective) He sang very loud (the adverb very modifies another adverb—loudly) Wow! You ran away very fast! (adverb really changes another adverb—quickly) Other intensifiers include slightly, enough, slightly, etc. This video provides further discussion and examples of intensifiers: Adverbs can also face confrontation, taking comparative and superlative forms. This is usually done by adding more and more before the adverb (more slowly, slower). However, there are some adverbs that take non-standard forms, as well, for which better and better are used (i.e., "It did well, it did better, and I did better "). Note: When using intensifiers alongside the adverb also, it should always appear before: "He also really loved the cake" is correct, while "He really loved the cake too" is not. Some people are of the opinion that words very much and really indicate weak writing. You probably saw adjective lists to use instead of these adverbs (together with an adjective). Although this may be true in some cases (horried orit will probably serve better than "really great"), much and really are not terrible words. As in most cases, cases,just need to be aware of your choices. When using these adverbs, dwell and see if there is a better way to say what you are saying. Relative adverbs are a subclass of adverbs dealing with space, time and reason. In this video, David gives a quick introduction to the three most common relative adverbs: when, where and why. As we have just learned, we can use these adverbs to connect ideas about where, when and why things happen. Read the following questions and turn them into statements using related adverbs: Where was Nina last time seeing the keys? When are the repairers coming? Why did the desk collapse? collapse? what are the functions of clause
