Creating a report card for a small business can help society design a business strategy that is actively shaped through targeted analysis and intent. The corporate relationship cards allow owners and managers to know exactly how productive the business is. Use the small business report card to influence operational and marketing decisions. A small business report card should be prepared for owners and managers or by the owner-manager at least once every three years. Make improvement plans and use the report card as a checkpoint. Draw the basic elements of the report card, which should include basic accounting information. According to MasterCard's "Small Business Report Card" guide, the basic elements that must be contained within a report card addresses the efficiency of the business cycle. The parts of the operating cycle are: Good, Liquidity, Debt and Profit. Consult with an accountant or Certified Public Accountant (CPA) to help calculate accounting basics and financial components such as "credit accounts". Save an electronic report card template using a word processing application like Word or Google Docs. Fill out the report card, along with all the notes that you can have and hit "Save as". Save the document as it will save a new copy, which you can rename. Include the year in the file name for easy file organization in the future. Check the report card again. As owner, managerteam member responsible for creating the company report card, you can add more items at your discretion. For example, if you know that problems with employees are causing a slowdown in productivity, add another section to the report card that assesses the effectiveness of the recruitment/firing process used in the organization. Print the report card with the answers compiled and distribute it to each team member. Go beyond the report card and determine which elements seem to be missing according to the consent or management decision, depending on the group's decision-making style. Change the report card as necessary. Make group plans for operational efficiency and write projections in the form of a timeline. It could be useful to start with the final goal and work backwards in the plan, filling the steps that need to be taken to reach the end target module at the beginning. It begins with the goal of reducing the debt by 10 percent, for example, within a year of the planning session. Fill the steps that must be taken, such as increasing profit, on one side to another. The first step could be to search for financial assistance, debt management and fundraising options, for example. It continues to release the corporate relationship card on a cycle of time. Embed the goals in the next year's report sheet to consolidate documents. Last updated on February 11, 2021 Coca-Cola is a world-loved product.
