Trish-charts.com - Discography Twenty One Pilots began speculating that a music video for the song "Chlorine" would be released the following day due to a series of teasers that the band posted on social media, including a short clip of a dirty swimming pool soundtracked by a drum beat similar to the one found on the track. The song is composed in the key of Bb minor, with Joseph's vocals ranging between the notes of F3 and Db5.[7] It is a pop, electropop, trip hop and rap rock song featuring a lowered voice found on the band's previous album Blurryface and a "menacing slow-burner" with an "annoyingly infectious" chorus comparable to the work of Bastille, Thom Yorke, DJ Shadow and Gym Class Heroes.[11][13][14][15] Paige Williams of Billboard suggested that the track was about cleansing your mind from dark thoughts,[10] while Caryn Ganz of The New York Times stated that it "describes how creativity can cleanse dark impulses but cause its own pain."
